

Are you applying to B-school to get a Master of Business Administration (M.B.A.) degree?

Join a MBA GMAT® Test Prep Study Group hosted by WHOmentors.com

Unlike graduates of medical schools and law schools, there is no licensing exam required to practice business in the United States.

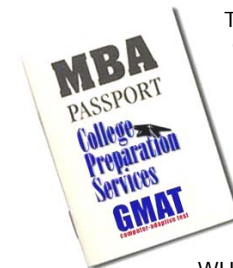

In addition, the quality of accredited schools offering MBA degrees varies tremendously.

This is a degree you can obtain part-time in 4 years, in an executive program in 1 year, via correspondence courses, and from schools with near 100% acceptance rates.

As a result, the value of your MBA degree is directly related to the prestige of the university and business school that grants it.

A recent study of the value of MBA programs concluded, "If you don't get into a leading business school, the economic value of the degree is really quite limited."
